Cuthbert was born in the Kingdom of Northumbria in the early 7th century. He was a shepherd boy who, at the age of 17, had a vision of Saint Aidan, the founder of the monastery of Lindisfarne. Cuthbert was so inspired by this vision that he decided to become a monk. He entered the monastery of Melrose, where he studied under Abbot Eata. After Eata's death, Cuthbert became the abbot of Melrose. In 685, he was consecrated as the bishop of Lindisfarne.

Cuthbert was a holy and humble man who was devoted to God and to his people. He was known for his miracles, his love of nature, and his compassion for the poor. He died on March 20, 687, and was buried in the monastery of Lindisfarne.
