As the relentless disease encroaches upon their beloved matriarch, the author and her siblings navigate the complexities of caregiving, grappling with the disintegration of their mother's memory and the fading of her vibrant spirit. Through moments of heartbreak and tender connection, they strive to preserve the essence of their mother's being even as her mind slips away.

With raw honesty and unwavering compassion, 'Lost and Found in the Alzheimer Forest' delves into the enigmatic nature of memory, the weight of loss, and the multifaceted emotions that accompany witnessing a loved one's decline. But amidst the shadows, the author discovers unexpected pockets of light—moments of lucidity, glimpses of resilience, and the enduring power of love.

About the Author

The author of 'Lost and Found in the Alzheimer Forest' is a former journalist and speechwriter who has witnessed firsthand the impact of Alzheimer's disease on her family. With a deeply personal perspective and a keen eye for detail, she has crafted a poignant and insightful narrative that sheds light on the challenges and triumphs of caregiving.

Through her writing, the author hopes to raise awareness about Alzheimer's disease, destigmatize dementia, and inspire others who are navigating the same challenging path.
