Derek Fisher is a former NBA player and coach who has faced an incurable disease with courage and determination. In his memoir, Soaring in the NBA, he shares his inspiring journey of adversity, hope, and finding what truly matters in life.

Fisher was diagnosed with an incurable kidney disease in 2008. At the time, he was a starting point guard for the Los Angeles Lakers and one of the most respected players in the NBA. The diagnosis was devastating, but Fisher refused to give up. He continued to play and coach, and he became an advocate for organ donation and research.

In his memoir, Fisher writes about the challenges he faced after his diagnosis. He talks about the physical pain, the emotional turmoil, and the uncertainty of his future. But he also writes about the hope he found in his family, his friends, and his faith.

Fisher's story is an inspiration to anyone who has faced adversity. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, we can find hope and strength. It is also a reminder that what really matters in life is not our accomplishments or our possessions, but the people we love and the relationships we build.
